Hamid Lellou

Center for Advanced Operational and Culture Learning

Hamid Lellou joined the Center for Advanced Operational and Culture Learning (CAOCL) in April 2008. He is a Middle East & Africa linguist and operational culture analyst with over 15 years of experience in Africa. Hamid grew up in Oran, Algeria where he used Berber, Arabic and French interchangeably throughout his education, making him a native speaker of the three. In 1989, he left Algeria to study Math, Physics, and Electrical Engineering in France. After his time in France, his desire to travel and experience more of Africa, landed him in Mauritania, Senegal, Gambia, Sudan, South Africa, Lesotho and other places, before coming to the US in 2006. Hamid is a regular contributor of articles in the Marine Corps Gazette and online publications. He has developed and presented culture and language learning concepts at international education conferences in Europe.
